Date :2009-01-01 1st edition 1st printing 2009-01-01 This book is analysis of chemical engineering (including instrumental analysis) courses supporting the theory of experimental materials. The book is divided into four. introduces the basic knowledge of analytical chemistry experiments. analytical chemistry experiments and chemical analysis and the basic operation of the basis for instrumental analysis experiment. experiment. and selected other aspects of experimental design. From the analysis of content analysis and experiments involving non-polar organic analysis. component analysis; from the analysis methods include chemical analysis and instrumental analysis methods commonly used in the analysis. the instrument used by both general analytical chemistry laboratory is equipped with conventional analytical instruments. but also modern equipment. with different experimental conditions and thus suitable for the institutions choose to do. Contents: first the basics of analytical chemistry experiments chemistry experiments analyzing the first chapter the basic requirements of Chapter II section students basic knowledge of chemistry experiment experimental laboratory safety rules Code Section III Section IV experimental reagents and analysis of water containers V solution preparation and concentration of representation of experimental data records in section VI. Chapter III of the report processing and experimental analysis of sample collection and pretreatment sample collection and preparation of Section II Chapter IV analyzes the sample decomposition chemical separation and enrichment techniques commonly used in Section I Introduction Section II evaporation and precipitation. and distillation separation of precipitation extraction method III IV V ion-exchange chromatography separation membrane Act VI of France two basic operations of Analytical Chemistry Experiment Chapter analytical balance and weigh the construction of Section II semi-automatic semi-automatic electro-optical electro-optical balance balance balance the use of rules...
