Reviews

It is great and fantastic. I actually have read and so i am certain that i am going to going to go through once again yet again in the future. I realized this ebook from my dad and i encouraged this book to find out.

CHALCEDON IN CONTEXT: CHURCH COUNCILS 400-700 (LIVERPOOL UNIVERSITY PRESS - TRANSLATED TEXTS FOR HISTORIANS)

Liverpool University Press, 2011. Book Condition: New. Brand New, Unread Copy in Perfect Condition. A+ Customer Service! Summary: These eleven essays, preceded by an introduction by Averil Cameron, derive from a conference held in Oxford in 2006 to mark the publication in 2005 of the Acts of the Council of Chalcedon in an English translation by Richard Price and Michael Gaddis. I reviewed that three-volume book in JTS, ns 59 (2008), pp. 380-3. I would add to what I wrote there that it notably advances historical understanding of the council and its business: it has rendered more accessible its records and, by the generally candid and unpartisan respect evident in the annotations and mostly well-judged comment, it enables all students to evaluate the long-standing, if not indeed permanent, theological significance of the council. The same approach and the same virtues are evident in the present companion volume. Without exception the essays are worth reading; each evokes thought, each invites questions and responses beyond the scope of such a review as this. I catalogue and describe the pieces. David Gwynn writes 'The Council of Chalcedon and the definition of Christian tradition'. Tradition at the council is visibly in process not merely of definition but of creation as authorities were chosen and designated. He quotes Gibbon who writes, with some perceived justice, of the ossification of the ancient theology as it became fixed and inviolate; Newman, on the other hand, seems to be preferred, who appealed to what one might call the Church's dynamic conservatism in remembering its past. Gwynn lightly evokes (he can scarcely do more in the space he has) the duty of historical theology to discriminate between 'remembering' and 'fabricating'. Examples of duty being done appear throughout the contributions here. Thomas Graumann, ' "Reading" the First Council of Ephesus',...
